

TWO KILLED IN FIGHT WITH NEGRO

Fugitive Pursued by Mob and Finally Shot by Chief of Police.

Huntington, W. Va., October 14.—Two persons were killed, two fatally wounded and five seriously wounded in a fight for the capture of George, alias "Red" Johnson, a fugitive negro. He shot and probably fatally wounded Detective George Lentz, when the latter attempted to place him under arrest, and shot seven members of the posse before being taken dead.

George Bias, railroad brakeman, member of posse. George Johnson, negro fugitive. After fatally shooting Detective George Lentz, the negro escaped into the hills back of the city and barricaded himself in a cliff, where he defied arrest. A posse, led by bloodhounds, soon trailed the negro to the cliff. When he saw the posse approaching, the negro, who was heavily armed, opened fire, and Charles Hale, who was following the bloodhounds, was shot. A moment later George Bias fell, with bullets through his head. He died a short time later.

The posse retreated to await reinforcements. When it advanced the second time, Johnson opened fire. During the battle Chief of Police Clingenpeck climbed to the top of the cliff where the negro was barricaded, and getting the drop on him, shot him dead. The body rolled out into view, and a mob dragged it down the hill to the city limits. Chief Clingenpeck addressed the crowd, which apparently was bent on mutilating the body, and succeeded in getting it to the morgue, where it was later viewed by several thousand persons.

An examination showed that the negro had been shot nine times. Little is known here of his identity. He is said to be from Virginia and to have had a brother killed by officers at Williamson, W. Va., last January.

RAILROAD AND SHIPPERS REACH AN AGREEMENT

Washington, D. C., October 14.—An agreement reached by counsel for the Boston and Maine Railroad and the milk shippers of Boston, in what are known as the "Boston Milk Cases," pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The cases were argued before the commission to-day, but on account of the pending Eastern rate case, they could not be taken up formally by the commission. Chairman Knapp announced, however, that the agreement of counsel involved a discontinuance of the proceeding before the commission. To this arrangement, Attorney-General Dana Malone, of Massachusetts, objected. He said he did not know the basis of the agreement reached, but unless an open case was made by the railroad to the question at issue would not be settled. "This question has been discussed for something like thirty-seven years," he said. "We have a law in Massachusetts, passed in 1910, which is designed to open the case of the railroads to all shippers on equal terms. The enforcement of that law must be final, and I appear here not to object, but to state the position of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

An informal conference was held between counsel on the case and members of the commission. It was agreed that the railroad should file a tariff on statutory notice—thirty days—fixing the rates on milk shipped into Boston in accordance with the understanding of counsel. They will be lower than the proposed tariffs suspended by the commission, and, according to the statements made, will place all milk shippers on terms of equality.

NO ACTION TAKEN ON PRAYER BOOK

Matter Will Go Over to Episcopal General Convention of 1913.

Cincinnati, Ohio, October 14.—The third joint session of the House of Bishops and the House of Deputies of the Protestant Episcopal Convention to-day was devoted to missionary topics.

No decisive action was taken on any of the leading questions now before the convention, but the afternoon was given over to addresses by bishops. The House of Bishops, at its morning session, discussed the vacancies that exist in the bishoprics of the country through the formation of the several dioceses and missionary districts.

The matter of omitting from the Episcopal prayer books the reference to "Jews, Turks, Infidels and Heretics" in the third collect for Good Friday will go over to the general convention of 1913 in New York City. The committee on the prayer book, to which the matter had been sent back Thursday, reported to-day that it was unable to agree on a substitute phraseology, and recommended that a commission of three from each order represent in the convention the question at issue would not be settled.

"This question has been discussed for something like thirty-seven years," he said. "We have a law in Massachusetts, passed in 1910, which is designed to open the case of the railroads to all shippers on equal terms. The enforcement of that law must be final, and I appear here not to object, but to state the position of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

HORSE BREAKS LEG IN RUNNING RACE

Gaily Continues and Finishes in Second Place, Then Is Killed.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Greensboro, N. C., October 14.—The Central Carolina Fair closed its most successful exhibition to-day. The racing of the final day was full of interest and tinged with excitement. In the final event, a running race with four entries, Euripedes, owned by E. G. McKenna, of Lynchburg, Va., broke his leg on the last quarter, though the horse gamely struggled over the remaining distance and crossed the wire second. Up to the last quarter Euripedes was leading, and then Firebrand began to pull up. Suddenly Euripedes dropped behind, then as suddenly settled back to action, and came the last stretch like a streak. Not until he had passed the wire was it known that a leg had been broken. The owner was forced to kill the horse. The races for the day resulted as follows: First race—2:27, the purse, $500; fastest time, 2:14 1-4, the record time for trotting in Greensboro track—Charlie Mitchell, third; 1:50, second; Judge Palmer, third; Jeff McGregory, fourth. Second race—2:17, the purse, $300; fastest time, 2:13 1-4, Roy Walker, first; Mary C. second; Thelma Wilcox, third; Miss Austin, fourth. Running race—five-eighths-mile; fastest time, 59 seconds—Firebrand, first; Euripedes, second.

LAD THROWN FROM HORSE.

Animal Steps on Boy's Head and Seriously Injures Him. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Washington, N. C., October 14.—William Respass, Jr., of this city, while riding horseback on Market Street yesterday, had the misfortune to fall, and the horse's feet, as suddenly stepped back to action, and came the last stretch like a streak. Not until he had passed the wire was it known that a leg had been broken. The owner was forced to kill the horse. The races for the day resulted as follows: First race—2:27, the purse, $500; fastest time, 2:14 1-4, the record time for trotting in Greensboro track—Charlie Mitchell, third; 1:50, second; Judge Palmer, third; Jeff McGregory, fourth. Second race—2:17, the purse, $300; fastest time, 2:13 1-4, Roy Walker, first; Mary C. second; Thelma Wilcox, third; Miss Austin, fourth. STUART ATTACKS SLEMP'S RECORD

Such malicious falsehoods against him in the campaign that the good people of Russell county would all vote to send him to Congress. Judge Fudge speaks. After holding his audience spellbound for more than two hours, Mr. Stuart took his seat amid a storm of cheers, and was followed by Judge G. Fudge, who, as ever, preached good Democratic doctrine, winding up his talk with the prediction that next November would see Henry Stuart sent to Congress as a Democrat. The Democrats of Smyth are better organized in this campaign than they have ever been before, and from all indications the Republican majority will be wiped out in the fall election and Mr. Stuart will be given the largest Democratic vote ever registered in the county.

SIGNAL PEOPLE HAVE GREAT DAY

Delegates to Convention Go to Old Point and Then Depart for Home.

More than 400 members of the Railway Signalmen's Convention spent yesterday at Old Point and Williamsburg, as the final entertainment feature of the fifteenth annual convention, which closed its business session at the Jefferson Hotel Tuesday afternoon. The special train left here yesterday morning at 9:15 o'clock, stopping long enough to make a tour of the historic points of Williamsburg, and reaching Old Point in time for luncheon at 1:30 P. M.

The luncheon was served in the Chamberlain Hotel, and was followed by salt water bathing in the hotel pool. A number of delegates, instead of returning to this city on the special train, which left Old Point at 4:45 o'clock, went from there to their homes in various parts of the country. Nearly all of those who did come back took the first train out, and by 10 o'clock there were only a few to tell of the trip.

Though at some other cities the attendance has been a little larger, membership of the convention was unanimous in saying that no more successful and enjoyable meeting has ever been held. They were constantly under the eye of the signalmen, and the program was carried out.

AMUSEMENTS.

Academy—What Every Woman Knows, matinee and night.
Bijou—The Boy From Wall Street, matinee and night.

Just Maude Adams. Hungry, almost starving, for a play worth the while, the playgoers of Richmond last night by the hundreds until every single seat was filled—boxes, orchestra, balcony and gallery.

It was what they had heard that they had; Maude Adams and a company of the highest class, in a comedy by that master craftsman, J. M. Barrie, "The Boy From Wall Street," has a line to the effect that if a woman has charm it doesn't matter what else she lacks, and if she lacks charm it doesn't matter what else she has, and then she goes on to say, time and again, "I haven't any charm."

With a masterly play, a masterpiece of art, of stagecraft, of character, of musical humor, and other parts are beyond criticism and most artistically were they presented; but so far as I can recall, only Miss Adams could play Maude and make an audience adore her.

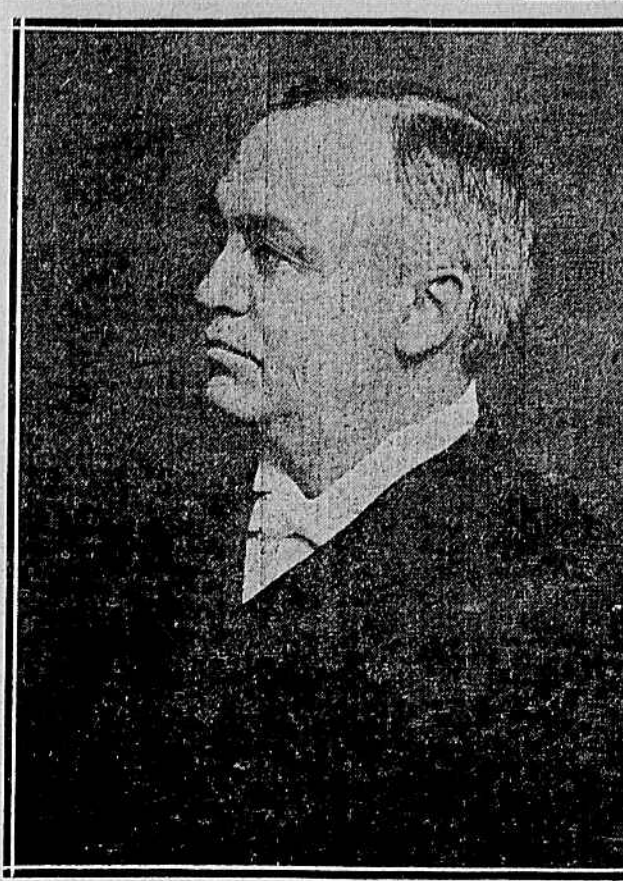

The play opens with the three canny brothers of Maude, who a little later admit it is twenty-six, cunningly luring their Scotch brains to bring a little romance into her life. John Shand (Arthur Byron) is discovered sneaking into their house, which he bought by the yard, because he has been unable to complete his college education, and they agree to pay his way through college. He is twenty-six years he will marry Maude, provided she will have him. His indomitable ambition makes him consent. The second act, after a short intermission, six years later, to Parliament, and foretells his marriage to Maude. Almost all the rest of the play is given up to the brilliant and successful efforts of Maude to aid her somewhat stolid husband in his career, and her efforts to make him a success in life. There is a brief love affair in Maude's life, but it is quickly concluded when Maude leaves him to his own resources, and when he realizes all she has been to him, he comes to his senses, and "falls right with the world."

But so brief a sketch utterly fails to convey the play, the humor, the quality of its charm, and the human, natural beauty of its pathos. One must see it in order to realize how perfect it is.

All the characters are wonderfully well drawn. The three brothers, Aleck, David and James, whose pictures—real pictures—were on the walls, were without a fault. J. Peyton Carter, David Torrence and Fred Tyler, who played these respective parts, never for an instant forgot their "burr," and they simply were the three elderly brothers, canny and shrewd, but loving and gentle to their sister.

Arthur Byron had an exceedingly difficult part to play. He was a hard-headed, strong, as he thought, scrupulously honest, unconsciously conceited and utterly sure of himself, he was thoroughly convincing in his most excellent piece of work. Dorothy Dorr was more than good as the Countess de la Briere, and Lumsden Hare gave a finished performance as Mr. Campbell. As for Miss Adams herself, it is hard to write moderately. Winsome, capable and attractive beyond words, her personality, her magnanimity, her individuality, are potent and powerful always—whether she be a young girl, a woman, a child, a girl, a minister, or half a fairy-child fascinating children and grown-ups, or all a woman, shielding and "mothering" her heavy husband, she is Maude Adams. May she never quite grow up! And how could she, believing in fairies as firmly as she does!

The express office was broken into, and the cash drawer opened, but the money had been removed and there was no loss. A number of express packages were opened and several taken. The matter was reported to the authorities early yesterday morning, and a bloodhound was put on the trail. The animal went to a point 200 or 300 yards distant, where it was belated by the police. The robbers boarded a freight train, making good their escape.

BOY KILLS HIS SISTER.

Gun Accidentally Goes Off and Child's Head is Almost Blown Off. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Washington, N. C., October 14.—Last Tuesday the home of J. Milton Lay, of Mt. Glead, was the scene of a sad accident, which resulted in the death of his bright little daughter. As the ten-year-old son was placing a shotgun in the closet, he struck the hammer against the door and in some way fired the gun, the load striking his eight-year-old sister in the left eye. Death was instant, and the head of the little girl was almost blown off.

WRIT OF LUNACY FOR ABRAM EBY

Former Mayor of Burkeville Hopes Thereby to Escape Second Conviction.

The term of Abram C. Eby, former Mayor of Burkeville, who has been in the Philadelphia prison for the past year, having been convicted of attempting to blackmail President McCrea, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, will expire on October 19. Warrants are pending for his arrest by the Federal authorities, who will seek to prosecute him on the ground of his having used the United States mail for purposes of fraud. In fact, it was through the efforts of the postal inspectors that Eby was located and arrested. Several threatening letters had been sent to President Johnson, of the Norfolk and Western, and to the heads of other large railway systems, all with a fictitious signature. The postal inspectors inserted in The Times-Dispatch a decoy advertisement, asking the signer of these letters to communicate with an address given, and Eby walked into the trap.

It is understood that counsel for Eby will ask for a commission of lunacy to be held here on his presentation to the Federal Court for trial. Alfred E. Cohen, of Richmond, and Charles Watson, of Crave, will represent Eby. According to the attorneys, Eby had become addicted to the use of some strange drug, corresponding to the Eastern hashish, which had undermined his moral and mental nature.
